

SciPy2020

Scientific Computing with Python
Virtual Conference • July 6-12

What is the SciPy Conference?

As a community, SciPy (Scientific Python) advances scientific and analytic computing through the development and promotion of open source Python software; Python usage continues to grow significantly in scientific and analytic computing thanks to the efforts of this conference and community.

The annual SciPy Conference brings together industry, government, and academic users to present their latest work, learn from skilled users and developers, and collaborate on advancing the ecosystem. In 2019, the conference had over 950 attendees.

Because of the COVID-19 pandemic, the organizing committee has decided to proceed with a virtual conference for SciPy 2020. The health and safety of the SciPy community is our top priority and we remain committed to bringing our community together the best way we know how, given the circumstances.

SciPy2020

5 days of Talks and Tutorials (July 6-10)

The conference days begins with two tracks of expert-led tutorials. These tutorials are very popular, with an introductory track for attendees new to Python, and intermediate and advanced tracks for experienced users.

In the afternoons, over 50 speakers and authors share their juried presentations and poster papers covering the latest developments in the use of Python in science. Birds-of-a-Feather Sessions, Mini-Symposia presentations, Lightning Talks, and Keynote Presentations provide a wide variety of opportunities for attendees to participate and learn.

2 days of Sprints (July 11-12)

Two days of sprints wrap up the SciPy Conference and provide an opportunity for collaborative coding and problem-solving on SciPy open-source projects. Last year's sprints contributed real, significant progress for many packages and tools.

How Will My Sponsorship Help the SciPy Community?

Support the SciPy community and code base:

Your sponsorship will help us to convert SciPy 2020 to a virtual conference this year so that the community is able to stay connected and engaged. Your support ensures that we continue to provide opportunities for the community to advance the Python scientific computing tools and packages.

SciPy offers scholarships every year for students and researchers who contribute to the community. In 2019 we were able to pay the travel, registration, and lodging costs for 19 selected applicants, including 11 diversity recipients, selected for their outstanding contributions to open source scientific Python projects. In the last 10 years, over 145 scholarship recipients have attended from countries around the world. SciPy will grant all who applied for financial aid a pass to this year's conference.

In addition to our general sponsorship packages, SciPy 2020 has unique sponsorship opportunities to support developers at critical points in their professional lives.

Financial Aid Sponsor \(two available\) \$6,000

The SciPy conference extends considerable Financial Aid to help those that are in school or just starting their careers to attend the conference and learn alongside and network with members of the community.

These scholarships can provide funding for conference registration. Sponsorship may be designated for diversity recipients. Sponsorship includes:

- Sponsor link with logo on SciPy 2020 website and virtual Sponsor Banner shown during daily 'Welcome' announcements
- 3 Virtual Session Passes

Sprints Sponsor \(two available\) \$5,000

If your company benefits from the Python Open Source Libraries, consider giving back by funding the attendance of sprint leaders and core developers at our programming sprints. Sprints gather together core developers and others interested in the specific library or package to push forward new features or improve the existing code base. This sponsorship will encourage more sprints at SciPy, yield significant package improvements, and ultimately increase the number of new contributors to core packages in the SciPy community.

Sponsorship also includes:

- Sponsor link with logo on SciPy 2020 website, and virtual Sponsor Banner shown during daily 'Welcome' announcements
- 2 Virtual Session Passes
